Or take few moments to read about Sgt. Jason Ross,USMC, a severely wounded by an I.E.D March 2011 in Afghanistan. His father has chronicled Jason's journey in the National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, MD.

What is clear in reading about these warriors is depth of their character, honor, duty, sacrifice, and resilience. Even the the resilient need assistance to transition from the life they were to have to the new life they must make. Mr. Ross and Sgt Ross have been supported by the WWP and other organizations.

Not much time, watch the announcement video of a partnership announcement by WWP. It includes Chad Watson, a marine, who lost a leg in Iraq 2006. He speaks to what the WWP pack meant to him.

Don't let even one be forgotten!

Founded in 2003 by a group of veterans and friends moved by stories of the first wounded service members return home from Afghanistan and Iraq, took action to help others in need. What started as a program to provide comfort items (WWP Backpack) to wounded warriors has grown into a complete rehabilitative effort to assist warriors as they recover and transition back to civilian life.

Tens of Thousands of wounded warriors and caregivers received support each year through WWP programs designed to nurture the mind and body, and encourage economic empowerment and engagement.
